Walking Sierra Madre this time of year is a delight, pure and simple. There are still pumpkins on lots of folks' And gobbled.... "J' accuse!" porches, which will last for months, till the squirrels find a weak spot. Those easterners who say we don't have Autumn color haven't seen OUR leaves and it will probably never feel like Fall, but the weather reports from Texas, where I will be celebrating Thanksgiving have included cold and rain. With any kind of luck, that will end before I get there. We'll be celebrating granddaughter, Jessie's 10th birthday, too, and I'm looking forward to

Walking Sierra Madre...The Social Side

I expect we're all doing something about Thanksgiving. Brining our turkey (best thing ever for a moist and tender Festive Bird!) latest brining I read about was a sugar and salt rub inside and out of the aforementioned Festive Bird. You might be in charge of pie making and mashed sweet potatoes mixed with sautéed apple chunks, butter, cinnamon and a little salt are fabulous. Best of all, is inviting family and friends to share the feast and all the familiar family stories. Like this one, but I know none of you folks have ever had the following experience...

The Ghost of Thanksgivings Past

The Festive Bird is in the stove, And time now for a nap. I laid me down, closed my eyes, And at the window heard a tap.

It's far too soon for guests to come, I need a little peace! The stuffing's ready, cranberries chillin', Pies overflow with pumpkin fillin.

The tap just keeps on at my window, But I'm not gonna look! There's nothing more for me to do, This is one tired and sleepy cook.

So I snuggled deep down in my afghan, Turned my head the other way. I don't care who's at that window, They can tap all day.

Off I went to slumberland and dreamed a

A kitchen, clean and washed and spotless, everything

That made me shriek with fright!

But then I dreamt a dreadful dream,

The tapping at my window, More insistent grew. And what was out there tapping, I'll now describe to you.

The Ghost of my Thanksgivings Past,

A turkey that was huge! Tapped an enormous beak at my window,

"Forty Thanksgivings, and more," he said, "Since you walked down the aisle. Forty turkeys you've served up, With sweet potatoes and a smile."

"Forty turkeys come and gone, And still your gravy's awful! And the year the turkey hit the floor, Should be declared... unlawful!!"

"Most of them were nicely done, I'll give you that," he

"But some were cooked so badly, You should have ordered Chinese instead!" What an awful dream, I thought, as I cowered in my bed.

The Ghostly Turkey wasn't finished, With his accusations many. And I, offering excuses, Discovered I hadn't any!

But then he smiled and said to me, "Your crimes are all forgiven. For those who've gathered at your table, Have rejoiced and laughed for hours."

"We turkeys relish meals like these, They are sweet as summer flowers!

Enjoy today, with friends and family, Gathered 'round your table, Give thanks for health and joy and peace... Then share this Thanksgiving fable."

And with a last gobble...gobble, the Ghost of Thanksgivings Past, Flew up, up, and away...

And I heard him exclaim, ere he flew out of sight... "Happy Thanksgiving to all... And for heaven's sake, learn to make better gravy!"

Happy Thanksgiving to you all! Hope it's the best one

GOLDENWORDS:

Dr. Dan's College Corner DISPELLING DANGEROUS MYTHS IN THE COLLEGE PROCESS

Myths, those stories so commonly in circulation that What if you won they are taken as truths, are rampant in the college search, comparison and application stages. Some of these legends are particularly distracting and unfounded, and can constrain high school candidates from exploring all their options in finding the right place in the higher education marketplace. Here are some favorites to consider and avoid:

--"It can't be a good school because I never heard of it." Friends, family, uncle Lou and even some guidance counselors can't be on top of the close to 4000 four-year institutions out there in the US and Canada (stand by for a future column on the terrific opportunities for US nationals across the border for innovative academic programs at excellent price points). Candidates with zip-code flexibility should look at schools their high school classmates examined and even enrolled at, then crosscheck for the "cousin" institutions. (ex. If you look at Bates College, you might also consider other regional smaller liberal arts schools in the Northeast and elsewhere--Bowdoin, Colby, Trinity (CT), Connecticut College).

--"You should go for most prestigious brand name undergrad school you can." Well, it's a telling comment on narrowness of vision to learn that 75% of high school seniors apply to the same 250 undergraduate schools with entrance expectations that range from really difficult to astronomically-We suggest you remember that it's your GRADUATE schooling that offers the great leveraging brand name effect.

Ah, you say, "but how can I get into Harvard Medical School unless I go to Princeton as an undergrad?" Look at the undergraduate colleges of record for first year medical students at Harvard, or first year law students at Yale, say. Surprises abound--Hanover College, Sonoma State, Bemidji State, Scripps College, Macalester College--these schools are among the 'sending' institutions that have fed enrollment at such prestigious graduate programs. You can get there from anywhere if you can become a winning candidate, really. We'll talk about exactly how to be that candidate in a future column.

-"My best price value will be at a UC or Cal State school." The vagaries of state budget cycles can wreak havoc on a student's plan to get through a UC or CSU institution in four years. You might actually need up to 15 extra months, for instance, to complete your pre-med requirements at UCLA because some crucial course sections could be cut by funding slashes. An extra year and trimester of costs might wipe out any ostensible in-state financial advantage.

within four years, and, as you'll learn in a future column, you'll be taught most of the time by real professors and will have earlier and deeper chances to do research with those faculty members, too. This isn't always the case at major Research I universities.

--"I can't leave California!" Most students want to go to college within a day's ride of home--but that can essentially mean anywhere in the US or Canada if your ride is a Boeing 757. Cali kids are really in demand across the country because they bring new and different perspectives to their destination colleges. The farther you go from LA, the more intriguing you'll be. And, if you come from a historically-underrepresented cultural group, you might even be more intriguing, as one of my students from Samoa learned in Kalamazoo, MIchigan.

And, there'll be enough other Californians wherever you go to lament together over the absence of In-N-Out in Bloomington or Ann Arbor or Burlington, really. Californians often make up the second or third largest population by state at many universities and colleges. Go away to college, come back for your interning, job searches and graduate training? Sounds like a great way to learn about another part of your country (or Canada, as I

There are other myths we can cover, and my next column will address the "Big School/Small School" folklore. As a prelude consider this: wherever you do go off to college, research tells us that you will have a 'portfolio' of friends that hovers around 90-95 other students across class years. That seems to be about all the 'relational space' students have, given their busy undergrad lives. How you find your portfolio players will differ, depending on a school's size or culture. Tune in for more on this topic, and learn about fabulous honors colleges embedded in big universities--a chance to have the best of both worlds of school sizes.

THANKFUL GIVING HELPS KEEP THEM LIVING

Thanksgiving is once again upon us, reminding us of the many blessings we have to be grateful for. It is the season to share special times around the table with family and less fortunate than ourselves

There are numerous non-profit programs that one can participate in to help facilitate the thankful giving process, not the least of which are those focused on helping animals. With countless precious pets locked up in shelters hoping to be given a second chance at life and certain few lucky ones who've temporarily escaped that fateful destiny through the kindness of rescues and foster families, there is no shortage of ways we can give to help animals live.

Here is a list of non-profit organizations that offer unique and easy ways of spreading the wealth to help animals in need. These are groups with which I am personally familiar and have had positive experiences. It is actually the short list, as there are far too many to include

Animazonia Wildlife Foundation - www.animazonia.org - Located in Perris, CA, Animazonia provides a permanent sanctuary for big cats and other exotic animals rescued from threatening conditions in captivity or displaced from the wild. Their 2015 fall fundraising is officially launched ~ You can shop and support them at two upcoming events: Talbots - Pasadena, Wed. Dec. 2, 5-8 PM, 497 South Lake Ave. Pasadena, 10% of purchases go to Animazonia. And: Strands of Harmony Jewelry Sale at Pasadena Senior Center, Dec.12, 1-4PM, 485 Holly St., Pasadena. THE JOY OF YOGA

UNLOCK ABUNDANCE

You guessed it — gratitude! The welcomed annual November reminder to take stock of our lives is upon us. When gratitude is in present-moment awareness, we experience satisfaction and comfort. The search for the next best thing is subdued. It's the ideal place to be. Gratitude is one of my favorite topics to write about. The very fabric of my being operates on it. I have learned to be grateful for every thing that has happened in my life to this point, including every decision, circumstance, and experience. Past and present, each day has made me who I am today. In fact, some of those not-so-great experiences are my greatest assets and have been the greatest opportunity makers for growth.

In this way of thinking, I stay teachable and willing to learn. Although I don't always feel successful, I put great effort into letting go of what isn't, what wasn't, and what will never be. This is acceptance and, with Madre, www.yogamadre.com

Besides resisting acceptance, I can then turn my attention to what I DO have and what IS possible. This creates momentum and positivity in every area of my life. There is ALWAYS at least one thing to be grateful for like clean running water, food, shelter, friends, family, yoga, meditation, and the list goes on and on!

The next step is putting gratitude into action. Taking special care of my body through yoga, meditation, diet, exercise and adequate rest is key. Nurturing my mind and spirit through education, service, and spending time with loved ones is important. If I do these things, I can move into each day with my best foot forward. Yoga builds awareness; it wakes us up. If I'm awake, conscious, and engaged, I am looking for gratitude and miracles in my life. They become recognizable

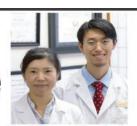

What are you grateful for? What are the ways in which you can cultivate a daily practice of gratitude?

DILLS WINE PICKS FOR YOUR TURKEY

Thanksgiving is upon us and it is my sworn duty to come up with a handful of wines that will go with a traditional oven baked turkey /smoked turkey, even the duck substitution will go well with my list. First, sorry in advance for all my chardonnay loving readers (see blow for my apology) A highacid, low-tannin Pinot, with bright cherry and cranberry flavors over rich spices, can do right by almost all the exuberant side dishes any turkey might require. San Simeon makes a marvelous Pinot Noir under $20 it

My second choice, though, isn't a surprise, at least if you love bubbles like I do. Two California Sparklers that I enjoy , Domaine Carneros Brut ($30) from the house of Tattinger, I have said that this wine from California comes as close to a 'real" champagne that I've had, I picked up a bottle recently at Pavilions and it will also go great with Prime Rib. Newsweek Magazine millennium and I agree, when I am shopping for that $20 wine it is my go to choice.

How about a Rose, my friend Jason Valenzuela, wine steward par excellence recommends the Domaine Carneros Brut Virage Rose it hails from Napa Valley and if you Virage Rose can find it for less than $20 buy it !!

Last but not least do consider a Cabernet, a favorite side kick of Prime Rib for years, our own Maddalena has an outstanding one and the price of Dills on KRLA AM 870 Radio. Plus on TV Charter $15 is perfect for the holidays, who does Prime Rib 188 5 PM, follow me on twitter thekingofcuisine

Neal Page (Steve Martin) is somewhat of a control freak. Trying to get home to Chicago to spend Thanksgiving with his wife and kids, his flight is rerouted to a distant city in Kansas because of a freak snowstorm and his sanity begins to fray. Worse yet, he is forced to bunk up with talkative Del Griffith (John Candy), whom he finds extremely annoying. Together they overcome the insanity of holiday travel to reach their intended destinations. Run Time:

why some people expend so much effort on a dish that typically tastes bland at best, and bland and dry at worst. I take that back. At worst, a colony of bacteria will fester in the

But TSA is really strict about what you can take on board these days."

So, you're stuck with more than half of the carcass. What to do, what to do...? Of course there's a plethora of recipes online for those experiencing upon, you're going to have to doctor up the bird here first!

CLOSEST TEMPERATE WORLD ORBITING QUIET STAR DISCOVERED

A team working with the European Southern Observatory's High Accuracy Radial velocity Planet Searcher (HARPS) at the La Silla Observatory in Chile has found that the red dwarf star Ross 128 is orbited by a low-mass exoplanet every 9.9 days. This Earth-sized world, just 11 light-years away, is expected to be temperate, with a surface temperature that may also be close to that of the Earth. Ross 128 is the "quietest" nearby star to host such a temperate exoplanet.

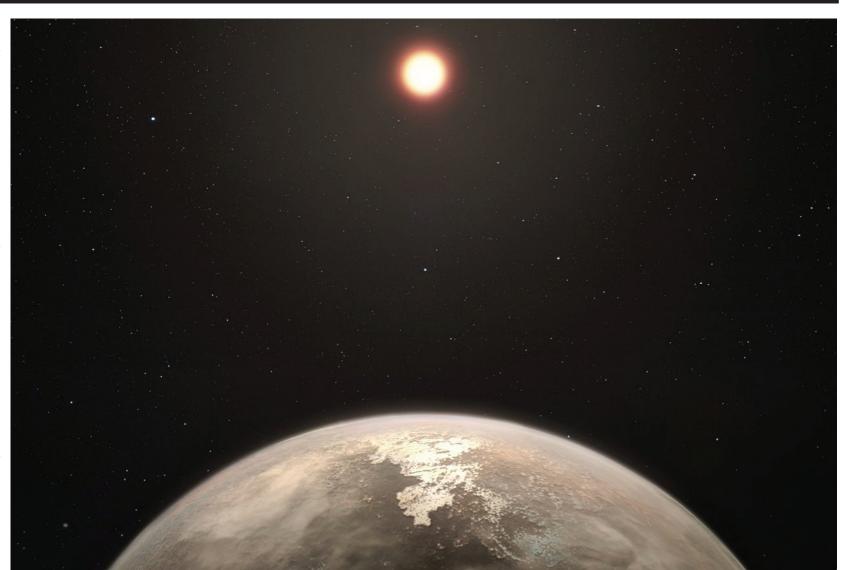

"This discovery is based on more than a decade of HARPS intensive monitoring together with stateof-the-art data reduction and analysis techniques. Only HARPS has demonstrated such a precision and it remains the best planet hunter of its kind, 15 years after it began operations," explains Nicola Astudillo-Defru (Geneva Observatory, University of Geneva, Switzerland), who co-authored the discovery paper.

Red dwarfs are some of the coolest, faintest, and most common stars in the universe. This makes them very good targets in the search for exoplanets and so they are increasingly being studied. In fact, lead author Xavier Bonfils (Institut de Planétologie et d'Astrophysique de Grenoble, Université Grenoble-Alpes/ĈNRS, Grenoble, France), named their HARPS program "The Shortcut to Happiness," as it is easier to detect small cool siblings of Earth around these stars than around stars more similar

Many red dwarf stars, including Proxima Centauri, are subject to flares that occasionally bathe their orbiting planets in deadly ultraviolet and X-ray radiation. However, it seems that Ross 128 is a much quieter star, without such flares, and so its planets may be the closest known comfortable abode for possible life.

Although it is currently 11 light-years from Earth, Ross 128 is moving towards us and is expected to become our nearest stellar neighbor in just 79,000 years—a blink of the eye in cosmic terms. Ross 128 b will by then take the crown from Proxima b and become the closest exoplanet to Earth.

With the data from HARPS, the team found that Earth orbits the Sun. Despite this proximity, Ross 128 b receives only 1.38 times more irradiation than the Earth. As a result, Ross 128 b's equilibrium may exist on a planet's surface. temperature is estimated to lie between -60 and

CHRISTOPHER Nyerges THANKSGIVING DAY:

It's Roots, and other Commentary

It is our uniquely American holiday where the States. family gathers, where we remember our roots, we share a meal, and we hopefully "give thanks."

But look how quickly such simple and profound holidays get perverted. Today, we hardly know what "giving thanks" even means, and so the act of giving thanks is lost on most of us. Newscasters talk about "turkey day," as if all there was to the day was eating turkey. Interestingly, most folks would not know whether or not they were eating turkey, or eating crow, and most of the time we're doing the latter, figuratively speaking. Then, when we have barely taken the time to consider the notion of "giving thanks," we get up early on the following "black Friday" to rush around with the mobs consumer-driven commercial craze into which World conditions we've morphed "Christmas."

In the history of North America, we are told that the first historic Thanksgiving Day was in October of 1621. After a successful harvest that year at the their own ways, they "prayed to God," in the ways Plymouth colony, there was about a week or so of that were appropriate to each culture. celebrations. The local Indians and the colonists joined together, with the Indians generally showing the colonists (mostly city folks) how to hunt for the meal which consisted of fowl, deer, duck, goose, and fish. Corn bread, wild greens, plums, leeks, and many other vegetables (wild and domestic) were shared in this celebration. Interestingly, there conditions so prevalent on today's reservations. is no recorded evidence that wild turkey or wild cranberries were part of the menu. And we tell and re-tell this particular American story as if it is all

In fact, some (but not all) historians question whether or not there were any religious overtones at all on this "first Thanksgiving," citing such evidence as the archery and firearms games, and the running and jumping competitions, which they say would never be done at religious ceremonies by the Puritans. The "competition" was more likely the men on each side doing their shows of bravado with weapons and physical feats before sitting down to eat.

What then is it, if anything, that sets the American (and the Canadian) Thanksgiving celebration apart from any of the other myriad of Harvest Festivals? Not widely known is that this "first thanksgiving" feast had mostly political overtones, which seem to have largely backfired. Tisquantum ("Squanto") was the interpreter for Massasoit, who was the political-military leader of the local Wampanoag tribe. Massasoit was worried that his weakened tribe would be taken-advantage of by the stronger Narragansett, because his own group had been so reduced from disease. Massasoit would permit the European newcomers to stay as long as they liked, as long as they aligned with Massasoit against the Narraganset. (Read all about it in your history books). > Despite the varied history of this day, Americans have chosen to see this as day set aside so that we do not lose sight of our spiritual blessings.

But we should not confuse "giving thanks" with "eating a lot of really good food." "Giving Thanks" is an enlightened attitude which accompanies specific actions. Perhaps sharing our bounty with the needy would be a better Thanksgiving activity than eating large volumes of food. More to the point, perhaps we should use Thanksgiving to give thanks where it is due -- to the indigenous peoples who have become the "forgotten minorities." Rather than "eat a lot," perhaps we could send blankets, food, or money to any of the American "looking for a good deal" to help us celebrate the Indian families or nations who today live in Third

A Weekly Religion Column by Rev. James Snyder

POOR AS I AM, ALL I CAN GIVE IS THANKS

It was a pre-Thanksgiving evening and the Gracious at Christmas time. On my part, I cannot come up Mistress of the Parsonage and I were enjoying some with all the members of our family without asking hot cider tea. Nothing goes down quite as nice as a hot questions to someone across the room. I recognize cider tea.

It was rather a quiet evening and I happened to glance over at my wife and saw her staring into space as it were. It concerned me because I knew that's what she did when she was thinking about something.

The problem that faced me was simply this. Was she thinking about me or something else? If it's me, I'm probably in trouble. If it's something else, I'm probably in trouble. No matter which side of the fence I'm on, I'm in trouble.

I was tempted to ignore the situation and continue the silent evening but something inside me would not let me sit still. I don't know what it is about us husbands, we don't know when to shut up and we don't know when to speak up. If only we could do the opposite of what we're thinking at the time, we probably could get along much better with the opposite side of the fence.

What are you, I asked her quite simply, thinking about so strongly?

Continuing to stare into space, she was silent for a few moments and then she said, I'm trying to figure out what gifts we should get for our family.

Say what? I haven't even demolished the Thanksgiving turkey yet and she's thinking about Christmas gifts.

That is the way with my wife. She cannot let a day go by without thinking of something three weeks or two months down the road. She cannot sit still and enjoy the moment.

I, on the other side of the fence, am able to sit down calm, relaxing feeling of just sitting and enjoying the them when I see them, but I always forget one or two when I'm trying to think about the family.

That is the difference between my wife and me. She can keep a list of the family in her head for months, yea even years and know exactly what they would like for Christmas and even for their birthday. I don't even know their birthdays and have to be reminded by my

Here we were, just a few days away from Thanksgiving and the wife is thinking about Christmas.

It seems to me that there is a reason why Thanksgiving is a time that we give thanks sometimes for the turkey in front of us. Sometimes, for the turkey in the family, if you know what I mean.

I said very cautiously to my wife, "Just relax and enjoy the evening and wait until after Thanksgiving to work on your Christmas list.â€

She came down out of her staring across the room and began staring at me one of those stares that I've experienced so many times in life. "I must,†she said most dramatically, "try to figure out what I'm going to get my family for Christmas.â€

I flashed a smile back at her and cuddled up to the silence for a few more moments.

One thing I can say about her, she is very generous when it comes to giving, especially at Christmas time.

As for me, my focus is on Thanksgiving. It's coming up very shortly and when it does, I want to be ready to enjoy every bit of that Thanksgiving dinner. I and enjoy this silence of the moment. I do not have know that around the table will be a variety of family the jitters to get up and do something. I have the members. I know that some of them will be very chatty about what's going on in their life. I will smile and nod most generously, but my focus is on Tom the

As my muse took me a little bit further down memory lane, I began to see and appreciate the difference between Thanksgiving and Christmas. I know they are about a month apart, but there's a bigger difference than days when it comes to Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Christmas is when you spend a whole lot of money buying Christmas presents for everybody in your family even those that, well, how can I say it, is not on your nice list.

Thanksgiving is quite different. Once I get beyond the turkey, I begin to realize that the purpose of Thanksgiving is simply to give thanks.

Christmas costs a lot, especially out of my wallet, but Thanksgiving costs more but in a different

For Christmas, I have to work out a budget and I'm always, or should I say my wife is always over budget. However, Thanksgiving is different. Thanksgiving is giving thanks and that has no monetary value on it Giving thanks is a good thing as David points out,

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O Most Highâ€ (Psalm 92:1). No matter how much coin I have in my pocket, giving thanks is the richest thing I could possibly give.

FOOTHILL GOLD LINE LIGHT RAIL EXTENSION TO GENERATE $2.6 BILLION IN ECONOMIC RETURN AND TENS OF THOUSANDS OF JOBS DURING CONSTRUCTION, STUDY REVEALS

Sierra Madre Edition: Sierra Madre - Arcadia - Monrovia - Duarte

Economic report details significant economic benefits to Los Angeles County both short-term – during construction – and once in operation

MONROVIA, Calif. - Today, the Foothill Gold Line Construction Authority (Construction Authority) released a report prepared by Beacon Economics, a leading economic research and the upcoming construction and operation of the 12.3-mile Foothill Gold Line light rail extension to the region. The report, entitled "Economic Impact Study of the Foothill Gold Line Glendora to Montclair Segment," quantifies the significant economic impact that will result from the $1.5 billion investment the region is making in the sixstation light rail project, including: jobs created, economic output, labor income and tax revenues. As highlighted in the 26-page report, during construction alone, the Foothill Gold Line segment will generate nearly 17,000 jobs, more than $2.6 billion in economic output, more than $1 billion in labor income and nearly $40 million in tax revenues for Los Angeles County. In addition, once passenger service begins, the ongoing operations of the six-station extension will generate an annual benefit to the county of more than $52 million in economic output, $17 million in labor income and nearly $800,000 in tax revenues, while generating

"We know that investing in public infrastructure projects like the Gold Line are economic engines," stated Habib F. Balian, CEO of the Foothill Gold Line Construction Authority. "But it is always impressive to see just how much each project directly benefits our region in job creation, economic activity and future revenues - it is a significant return on investment."

The Beacon report also highlights the secondary economic benefits for the region from private investments in transit-oriented development already made or planned within a half-mile radius forecasting firm headquartered in Los Angeles, of the six future Gold Line stations from Glendora detailing the economic benefits resulting from to Montclair. The extension already has spurred $1 billion in private investments in residential and commercial development, including nearly 1,200 residential units near the future Montclair station alone and one million square feet of commercial property. An additional nearly $600 million in development is planned along the corridor; with more than 1,800 new residential units and 10,000 square feet of commercial space in the works within a half-mile radius of a future station.

> "The economic story of the Gold Line must also include the long-term private investment that is happening around these light rail stations as the area evolves from what was historically industrial land to suburban communities," added Balian. 'There is a unique opportunity along this light rail line to see extensive growth, allowing the region to add much-needed housing and jobs near our expanding county rail system; adding to the economic benefits of our investment well into the

ALAN SANVICTORES SWORN IN AS MONROVIA PD'S 9TH POLICE CHIEF

Pasadena Edition: Pasadena - South Pasadena - Altadena - San Marino

On November 7, 2017, Alan Sanvictores was officially sworn in as Monrovia PD's 9th Chief of Police by City Clerk Alice Atkins at a special City meeting. Most recently a Captain with MPD, Sanvictores went through a full interview process before his appointment as Chief.

Santvictores began his career with MPD 22 years ago, first hired as a recruit in 1995. He has served as a Police Officer, Police Agent, Detective, Sergeant and Lieutenant. He was promoted to Captain in January,

After it was announced Sanvictores was to be the next Police Chief, retiring Chief Jim Hunt said, "Alan has served as our senior Captain for nearly eight years. During that time, he has done a phenomenal job of supporting initiatives in the Police Department and has displayed integrity, innovation, and leadership at the highest levels. I know that Alan will be a simply tremendous Police Chief for the community."

Monrovia Police Chaplain Terrence Brown gave the Invocation; he always finds the right words for whatever the occasion may be. Mayor Adams Manager Oliver Chi had nothing but praise for the incoming Chief. After he was sworn in as Chief, Sanvictores thanked Chi and the Council, as well as his family for their support as he faced his new position. He told his wife Lisa how he appreciated her for her support that began in college, and his daughters also for their support during his career. Endurance: A Year in Space, A Lifetime of Discovery by Scott

A stunning, personal memoir from the astronaut and modern-day hero who spent a record-breaking year aboard the International Space Station—a message of hope for the future that will inspire for generations to come. The veteran of four spaceflights and the American record holder for consecutive days spent in space, Scott Kelly has experienced things very few have. Now, he takes us inside a sphere utterly hostile to human life. He describes navigating the extreme challenge of long-term spaceflight, both life-threatening and mundane: the devastating effects on the body; the isolation from everyone he loves and the comforts of Earth; the catastrophic risks of colliding with space junk; and the still more haunting threat of being unable to help should tragedy strike at home--an agonizing situation Kelly faced when, on a previous mission, his twin brother's wife, American Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, was shot while he still had two months in space. Kelly's humanity, throughout, as he recalls his rough-and- history. It's a scarier—and more human—story tumble New Jersey childhood and the youthful inspiration that sparked his astounding career, and as he makes clear his belief that Mars will be the next, ultimately challenging, step in spaceflight. In Endurance, we see the triumph of the human imagination, the strength of the human will, and the infinite wonder of the galaxy.

FIRE SAFETY TIPS - AVOID COOKING FIRES THIS THANKSGIVING

By Jenee' Child, CEO SOS Solutions

At that age, I was unaware that the heat from the grease would cause the metal measuring cup that I was holding to instantaneously become hot.

I intended to pour the grease down the sink drain. Instead, in an instinctive reaction to holding onto a scorching object, I immediately flung the metal cup into the air. Sizzling hot bacon grease poured down my face and the front of my chest, scalding my skin.

I can't imagine how horrific it must have been for my mother to awaken to the piercing sound of my high-pitched screams. I vaguely recall, in her panicked state, being thrown into a bathtub filled with cold water and her impaling me with ice cubes. happened, like a stove or kitchen fire.

However, the NFPA discourages against deep frying because "deep-fryer fires are responsible for 5 deaths, 60 injuries, destruction of 900 homes and $15 million in property damage per year". The amount of cooking oil required to fullyimmerse a turkey, combined with the oil's high cooking temperature, pose a significant danger. The oil can quickly catch fire and the oil splatter, heat and flames often result in severe burns, other injuries and destruction of property.

FAMILY MATTERS By Marc Garlett

DO YOU OWN RENTAL PROPERTY? HOW PROACTIVE, COMPREHENSIVE ESTATE PLANNING CAN HELP

A comprehensive estate plan should address all of your assets. For most people, an estate plan must include three common categories: (1) your home; (2) financial accounts, like your checking and savings account; and (3) personal property. Other types of assets - such as life insurance, retirement funds, and annuities - should also be considered as part of your estate plan.

If you own rental property, however, your estate plan will be more complicated because there are some unique considerations.

Rental Property & Estate Plans

It is no surprise that one of the risks of being a landlord of commercial or residential property is the threat of lawsuits. An injured guest or tenant, a claim under the landlord-tenant act, or a lease dispute can all end up in the courtroom. However, a well thought out rental property plan within your estate plan can hedge against this risk.

Protecting Your Assets: A prudent landlord purchases adequate insurance coverage as the first line of defense. Sometimes, however, the insurance policy's limit is not sufficient to cover damage awarded by a court. When this happens, the next place the prevailing party looks to for satisfaction of judgment is the property owner's personal assets, which leads us to the next layer of protection.

Using a Business Entity as Protection: Owning property through a business entity, like a limited liability company (LLC), can help protect personal assets against seizure. That being said, merely filing paperwork to create an LLC isn't enough. The LLC must be treated as a true business entity and all reports, filings, bank accounts, and other family by calling 626.587.3058 or visit www. formalities must be met at all times in order to GarlettLaw.com for more information.

benefit from the liability protection of the business entity. Additionally, when meshing your rental property ownership with your estate plan, you must consider who can manage your assets if you're unable to do so, our next consideration.

Who Is Managing Your Assets: Another factor to consider is the trustee who manages the living trust. A trustee bears the responsibility of managing the property owned by a trust for the benefit of the trust beneficiaries. The exact duties of a trustee may vary depending on what assets are owned by the trust and the trust's terms. While income from the rental property made you financially successful, many institutional trustees - or someone outside of your circle of family and friends - will often liquidate assets and invest the funds. This result may or may not be what you want done with your assets. For this reason, using an LLC to organize your rental property holdings and have the trustee simply collect the net income from the overall operation can be a way to ensure your wealth remains invested in the rental properties that made you successful.

Tax Advantages Through 1031: While many think of estate planning and LLCs as strategies to save on death taxes and provide for heirs, a good attorney can help with much more. A 1031 exchange is a vehicle to defer taxes from the sale of rental property. The rules to qualify are complex, but can save enormous amounts of income tax, depending on your situation. Your attorney should ensure your trust, powers of attorney, and LLC allow your family to take advantage of this taxsaving law if you are incapacitated and unable to manage your own affairs.

Bottom Line

You've likely worked hard over the years to acquire, build and manage your rental property portfolio, along with your other assets. Call us now for an estate plan review to make you're your estate plan takes all of this into account so that you and your family receive the highest level of benefits and protection.

THE UNITED STATES OF HYPOCRISY

HYPOCRISY" Noun the practice of claiming to have moral standards or beliefs to which one's own behavior does not

Well that stuff that hits the proverbial fan has finally happened. In the midst of all the political chaos, Presidential mismanagement and lying and nuclear threats, a problem that has permeated this society and every other society on this planet since forever, has finally, really, come to the forefront. That problem is the culture in which men are raised and how society condones the disrespect and abuse of women.

Fellas, don't put the paper down. This isn't a rant on men. This isn't a vindication of women. It is a statement of facts. We have all overlooked this problem all of our lives. Fortunately now, thanks mainly to Bill Cosby and Harvey Weinstein, the genie has really been let out of the bottle in such a way that HE cannot be stuffed back in.

Before I go further, let me isolate a few obvious forms of bad behavior. SEX WITH CHILDREN IS WRONG! Rape in any form is wrong. No means no. Period. Secondly, exchanging employment or contract opportunities for sexual favors is wrong. And a word to the wise, making assumptions about whether or not a person wants to is foolish

Unwanted advances and sexual abuse by both men and women are unpleasant and like most unpleasant things in this society, we don't want to deal with them. The very violent or sensational make the news, but until the last few days, we've had an attention span of exactly 5 minutes for every public sexual transgression. In the past, we've made jokes about it, ever heard of the expression 'the casting couch'? Or we made successful movies about it, yes, Mrs. Robinson (The Graduate) imposed herself on an initially unwilling young man. We have vilified women who have come forward, remember Anita Hill, and always questioned women's motives....never the man involved. We actually have blamed women for the way we dressed, or where we were at the time. And most egregious of all is how our society has made it taboo for people, especially women to speak up.

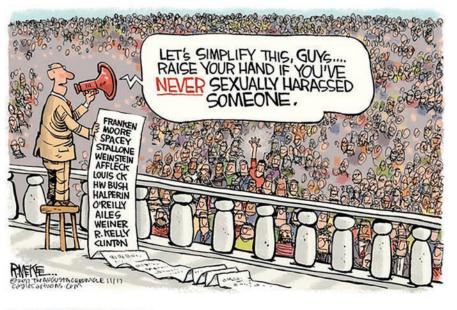

Think about it: Why in the hell should any child feel threatened to report sexual predators? They feel that way because we have outwardly shown that they will be ignored, punished or ostracized. A 14 year old standing up against a well-respected 32 year old? No one will listen to her and if they do, they won't say a thing. All the while proclaiming to be a society that embraces high moral standards.

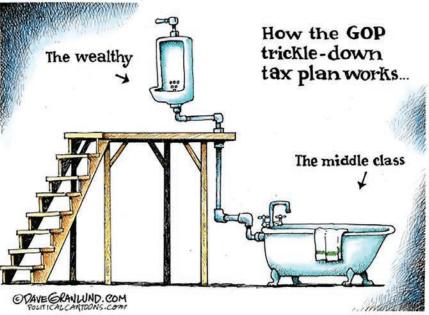

And what about this: Why is it the first question out of everyone's mouth is Why Now? Unless you have been a victim of sexual misconduct or abuse you will never understand. A child fears rejection; a teen fears being discredited and ignored and women fear retaliation. Moreover, and everyone who can #metoo will tell you, that the years spent learning to move on with your life are not worth unraveling when you don't believe anything will happen that will protect you or the next person.

Now the issue has been thrown into the political arena again, making many people shy away from looking at the real problems. As a society, we must stop saying the words and actually do something. We have to amend our way of thinking and behaving so that it is clear that all people, regardless of gender can feel free to speak up when they have been violated. And we have to stop acting like a position of power gives you the right to "grab 'em....", as the man that conned his way into the White House boasted about. The gap between what a woman perceives as inappropriate and what a man thinks is inappropriate is a mile wide. We must close that gap and work on being on the same page. In Al Franken's initial response he said one thing that I truly believe. He said, "I certainly don't remember the rehearsal for the skit in the same way". I have no doubt that he doesn't. In the traditional way that our society thinks, he probably believes that his kiss was 'all that' not the disgusting 'fish mouth' kiss that Leeann Tweeden described. That's because he wanted it and she didn't. Therein lies the root of far too many inappropriate actions. One party assumes it is okay, the other doesn't.

So what happens next? You tell me. Do we file this away as we have done in the past? Do we make a movie about it? Do we use it as political fodder against our opponents? Our do we start at home, having honest discussions with our families? We can't legislate moral behavior. We have to embrace it individually. Perhaps this might be a good Thanksgiving Dinner topic, "What can we do to stop the hypocrisy?" #itsaboutdamnedtime

A PRAYER FOR PEACE THAT CALLS US TO ACT

HARRISBURG, Pa. - Howard Henry's no preacher.

But the prayer he uttered outside a home on Logan Street in Harrisburg on a chilly night last week for Kaliah Dearing, 16, and Natasha Harner, 24, who had been found shot dead there, carried the same weight as if they'd been uttered by a man or a woman of the cloth.

"This really is the time for us join together and ask some very important questions," Henry said. "What is love? What is love? Does love really conquer all or not? That's why we're here. God is everything or God is nothing, right?"

As someone shouted out an "Amen," Henry continued.

"We have to understand the truth of God," he said. "We're not worried what other people did. We have to understand what God wants of us." Then he stepped down from the stoop of the home that Harner and Dearing, their lives cut tragically short, shared together.

His voice was hoarse. His hands were cold.

The questions that Henry posed that night challenge all of us. And they call us to act. They're posed in the face of unspeakable violence, both in the streets of Pennsylvania's capital city and elsewhere, in such places as Sutherland Springs, Texas, whose names we only learn when their tranquility is shattered by the sharp report of semi-automatic weapons fire. So we ask ourselves: Does love really conquer all?

Is love enough to overcome the shocking darkness that fills someone's soul when they choose, as a man named Stephen Paddock did last month, to mow down 59 people and injure hundreds more people gathered for a concert at the Mandalay Bay hotel and casino in Las Vegas. The answer, tragically, and obviously, is that it is not.

If love alone were enough, then it would have been enough to put an end to the sad catalog of mass shootings that have claimed thousands of lives across America over the last five years. It would have been enough to calm the spasms of violence that resulted in the slaughter of the children of Sandy Hook or the revelers at the Pulse nightclub in Orlando, Fla.

If love alone were enough, then perhaps Harrisburg would not have seen, with the deaths of Harner and Dearing, its eighth homicide of the year.

But since it is not, then we need to look to the second half of Henry's impromptu prayer: What's being asked of us, as a society, as a community, as a nation, to staunch the flow of blood, to end

The answers are not easy. And the obligations are heavy.

It starts, obviously, with looking after each other; with taking to heart the admonition to love our neighbors as ourselves; to committing ourselves, however we can, and in whatever small way we can, to making the streets safer. And people of good faith and character are working toward

There is a place, too, for educators, for community groups, for law enforcement, for counselors, for clergy, for parents or extended family, for anyone who can act as a role model, a guide, a friend. Someone who can provide stability and a home and recognize the warning signs of violence and intervene before it's too late.

But they can't do it alone.

There is room, too, for policy makers, for our elected leaders, who are called to move beyond the bromides of their own "thoughts and prayers" - however earnestly offered - and to act. That responsibility was starkly outlined last week by U.S. Sen. Christopher Murphy,

D-Connecticut, who offered that "the terrifying fact is that no one is safe so long as Congress chooses to do absolutely nothing in the face of this epidemic." Murphy's lengthy remarks are worth reading in their entirety, but one part stands out:

"The paralysis you feel right now - the impotent helplessness that washes over you as news of another mass slaughter scrolls across the television screen - isn't real," he said. "It's a fiction created and methodically cultivated by the gun lobby, designed to assure that no laws are passed to make America safer, because those laws would cut into their profits."

After every one of these mass slaughters - and the killings that wrack our streets - we are told that no law, no government program, would have prevented the newest tragedy

We've been told it so often now that it has become self-perpetuating, that it's become its own

Henry's prayer challenges us to honor our obligation to each other and to do better than that. Murphy's words, forged from the hard experience of Newtown, point the way out of the darkness.

The only question is whether we are brave enough to work together, all of us, to take up those

And the answer, of course, is that we must. Or Howard Henry's prayer, offered on a cold night on a dark street in Pennsylvania's capital city, will die on the air.

MAKING SENSE by MICHAEL REAGAN

NOT SEN. MOORE AND NOT WEIRD AL

Hello, Senator Franken.

Welcome to the growing list of creepy guys in Hollywood and Washington who apparently think it's OK - or funny -- for men in power to sexually harass or assault women and men. We'll see if the liberal media and his fellow Democrats treat the charges against Franken as seriously as they've been treating the ones against Republican

Senate hopeful Roy Moore of Alabama. Franken, the very unfunny comedian who became the very liberal senator from Minnesota in 2009, is apologizing as fast as he can - and even calling for a Senate ethics committee to investigate himself. But weird Al's got a lot of 'splaining to do.

On-air radio personality Leeann Tweeden of Los Angeles has accused him of kissing her without her consent and groping her in 2006 during a USO tour in Afghanistan.

There's even a damning photo of a grinning Franken cupping his hands over Tweeden's breasts while she slept that has quickly gone viral.

Given that sexual predators of all kinds don't commit a single sleazy act of molestation, assault or harassment and then retire, we'll probably be hearing from other women who had unwanted encounters with Franken.

In any case, Franken apparently is not Congress' lone harasser.

We learned just this week that for years Congress has had a secret slush fund to pay off women who had been victims of sexual harassment by its members.

More than $15 million in settlements - paid by taxpayers --was spent from 1997 to 2014 to protect our duly elected slime balls from bad publicity they probably deserved. Meanwhile, in Alabama Roy Moore is still refusing to exit the special election next month to fill Jeff Sessions' vacated seat.

Voters may elect him and ignore the credible charges that he hit on or assaulted underage girls as a 30-something DA nearly 40 years ago.

But I think Moore is guilty as charged. Having lived through molestations and abuse by a man as a boy, I think I can read when someone is being honest about their accusations and someone is not.

I tend to believe the women accusers more than I believe Roy Moore. People will say, "Why did the women wait 40 years to bring these charges up?"

I tell them I didn't reveal my sexual abuse for 34 years. It's not something you're dying to

The charges against Moore are coming forward now because the young women he took advantage of long ago are being empowered by the "#Me Too" campaign.

It's a new era. Victims of sexual assault by the powerful and famous -- women and men -- can now come out of the closet and tell their horror stories. Moore's got zero defenders in the GOP establishment, and his poll numbers are crashing.

It's true he has not been convicted in a court of law, and probably could never be. But he's been declared guilty in the court of public opinion. He should step aside. Alabama's governor should delay the election or do whatever he can to allow a write in. The Moore and Franken cases are a good morality test for conservatives and liberals. Is sexual assault, harassment or serial creepiness by a man always wrong, or is it just wrong when the guy charged with it is not on your political team? During the 1990s Bill Clinton's misbehavior and possible crimes got a pass from Democrats and most of the mainstream liberal media, which didn't believe the women accusers or denigrated them. I see some in the conservative media making the same partisan mistake by disbelieving

In the 1990s conservatives were right about Bill Clinton. Let's not be wrong about Roy Moore. I don't care what party he belongs to, I don't want someone like him in the Senate any more than I want someone like Al Franken.
